

Each member must affirm, accept, and sign as binding the following code of ethics:

I hold sacred the inalienable right to all men/women to own and bare arms for the purpose of self-defense. I further hold that those who are trained in the ancient arts of self-defense take upon themselves obligations and responsibilities, which I now freely take upon myself. I therefore pledge the following:

That I shall never misuse my skill to hurt or make afraid.

That I shall fight if forced to defend myself, I shall be slow to anger, loathe to take offense, quick to forgive, and ever to forget personal affront.

That pride shall never rule my passions.

That I will defend with all the skill I possess the weak, the helpless, and the oppressed.

I pledge an unswerving loyalty to my instructor and those who have gone before.

I pledge a continued effort to sharpen my skill, to increase my knowledge and to broaden my horizons.

I understand that as a member I accept the Association's Mission Statement to be my own goal.

I understand that the private affairs of other members and instructors that come to my attention during the exercising of my responsibilities are privileged communications and must never be discussed with any living soul.

I vow that I will never violate this code for the sake of personal profit.

I recognize the right and necessity for order and regulation within the Arts and accept the right of the Association to govern its own affairs by mutual consent.

When speaking to those within this fraternity, I shall make no statement that will detract in any way from the frame or reputation of any of my fellows.

When speaking of those belonging to another system or a different Art, I shall strive to say only those things I know to be fact, avoiding with all diligence any hearsay and gossip.

Member: _____ Date: _____

Guardian: _____ Date: _____

(If under 18 years of age)

Membership Code of Ethics

Membership Code of Ethics

For applicants records.

Each member must affirm, accept and sign as binding, the following code of ethics.

I hold sacred the inalienable right to all men/women to own and bare arms for the purpose of self-defense. I further hold that those who are trained in the ancient arts of self-defense take upon themselves obligations and responsibilities, which I now freely take upon myself. I therefore pledge the following:

That I shall never misuse my skill to hurt or make afraid.

That I shall fight if forced to defend myself, I shall be slow to anger, loathe to take offense, quick to forgive, and ever to forget personal affront.

That pride shall never rule my passions.

That I will defend with all the skill I possess the weak, the helpless, and the oppressed.

I pledge an unswerving loyalty to my instructor and those who have gone before.

I pledge a continued effort to sharpen my skill, to increase my knowledge and to broaden my horizons.

I understand that as a member I accept the Association's Mission Statement to be my own goal.

I understand that the private affairs of other members and instructors that come to my attention during the exercising of my responsibilities are privileged communications and must never be discussed with any living soul.

I vow that I will never violate this code for the sake of personal profit.

I recognize the right and necessity for order and regulation within the Arts and accept the right of the Association to govern its own affairs by mutual consent.

When speaking to those within this fraternity, I shall make no statement that will detract in any way from the frame or reputation of any of my fellows.

When speaking of those belonging to another system or a different Art, I shall strive to say only those things I know to be fact, avoiding with all diligence any hearsay and gossip.